Introduction to the new NHS 10 year Plan
Jess Berry, Senior Commissioning Manager, North Hants CCG Paper circulated in the meeting with some background. The plan, unveiled by Simon Stevens and Mrs May, committed to giving a third of the extra £20bn the NHS will get by 2023 on GPs, community care and mental health. Currently they account for less than a quarter of spending, while hospitals take up around half of the £114 billion frontline budget. Mr Stevens called it a "practical, costed and phased route map" for the decade ahead. What will the money be spent on? Mental health - £2.3bn extra of the £20bn, while GP and community care gets £4.5bn. NHS England said that will help pay for: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Mental health support in schools and 24-hour access to mental health crisis care via the NHS 111 service • Extra support in the community so patients can be discharged quickly from hospital and reduce the number of outpatient appointments by a third • Digital access to health services, including online GP booking and remote monitoring of conditions such as high blood pressure • More social prescribing to give GPs a range of options to tackle social problems like loneliness through connecting people to activities such as choirs and arts groups • Healthy living programmes for patients struggling with ill-health • New testing centres for cancer patients to ensure earlier diagnosis • DNA testing for children with cancer and those with rare genetic disorders to help select the best treatment NHS England believes that combined the new vision could save 500,000 lives through preventing diseases, such as strokes, heart problems and cancer, and spotting them earlier to improve the chances of survival. Early days so not it is clear what it could mean as the delivery mechanisms and funding cascades from National, to Regional to Sub Regional and then to cities and towns like Basingstoke. A watching brief will be maintained.	Jess B
